CLASS HISTORY

September - 1943

First grade was frightening for one day. We soon began romping around as the picture shows. From pulling pig tails to spelling "C-A-T" to $2+2$ to second grade to third and then to fourth where life seemed beautiful. It was there we danced around a maypole and thought ourselves as artistic as the Greeks and were taught not to use too many "ands".

Intermediate grades were fun because we were old enough to remember the lyrics of an operetta and the lines of a play which went over great in the old grade 6. Here we were king of the elementary school. We liked "story time and American History" but most of all we enjoyed the thought that we were on the brink of passing from the same room all day to the wonderful realm of high school. We were buffeted around seventh grade, hit a fair stride in eighth and were brought down a few notches during ninth grade initiation.

Senior high school saw us snarled with the Turkey Raffle that netted us a fair profit are trying to rush these pages to our publisher so that we can get on with the business of our final semester.

Before us loom Class Night, Commencement, and our Washington trip. And beyond that looms the future, made better by our having reached this goal so that we might attain our colophon.

which we promptly squandered on the Junior Prom. We danced "Under Western Skies" to the music of Lee Vincent. We like to remember our Prom - the hard work, the fun, the decorating, and the pride we felt when we looked at the finished product. We
